PROSPECTUS OF THE ATLANTA MEDICAL AND SURGICAL JOURNAL.

The third series of this Journal is commenced with the view of making it a medium of communication between members of the Medical Profession, by which the advancement of science may be promoted, new practical truths disseminated, and a fraternal feeling and unity of purpose secured among honorable practitioners.

Its course, as heretofore, will be independent, yet, courteous and respectful in opposing error.

Medical journalism is more a "labor of love" than of pecuniary profit, and we hope practicing physicians in this and other States, will feel sufficient interest in the regular publication of such a work, to sustain it by cash subscriptions.

The Journal contains sixty-four pages, and will be published monthly at $3 a year, in advance.

The Editors propose, for this small sum, to afford physicians the current medical news. To do this, thirty or forty journals are thoroughly scanned monthly, and the cream of these publications culled for our pages.

No personal feuds, parties or cliques, will receive encouragement at our hands. The advancement of medicine, as a science, the success and usefulness of the profession, and the highest standing of ethics and education will be advocated fearlessly on all occasions.

On business of any kind connected with the Journal, address
"Editors ATLANTA MEDICAL AND SURGICAL JOURNAL."

Atlanta, Ga., April, 1871.
