It is incredibly important to allow for the preservation of online-connected video games and media. This exemption will allow cultural content, in which people sometimes spend months if not years of their lives, making to continue to be available both to researchers and others. By not allowing for this exemption, it would mean that huge parts of peoples lives are gone and will be unavailable. Unlike movies which can be continued to be consumed on other media, these games that require server connections cannot be played or viewed without a server being available, and this exemption is key to allowing research to be done to keep these parts of our culture available.
